

Adolescent Program

Through our Adolescent Program at Alliance Health Center, we bring special care to boys and girls with such problems as attention deficit, conduct disorder, oppositional defiant, depression, post-traumatic stress and behavioral problems.

We know adolescents have unique psychological and emotional needs, and they view therapy and treatment differently. We offer a program that works with 12- to 17-year-olds to break the cycle of depression, rebellion or poor choices through inpatient treatment in a carefully organized, thoroughly supportive environment — a place where consistency is expected and treatment is tailored to each individual.

We provide discharge planning that includes communication with the family and referral source and discharge instructions.

Healing and recovery

The adolescent program includes making sure each patient is able to maintain school studies during treatment.

We also include recreational therapy as an integral part of the overall program. Such therapy includes arts, crafts, physical fitness and recreational activities.

An adolescent may be referred to Alliance Health Center by various sources, such as a parent, physician, hospital, school, judge or state agency.
